

Useful Tips To Measure Your Space Before Furniture Shopping

Every house has different furniture settings and space requirements. To make sure that your furniture turns out to be a perfect fit, you need to measure the space available before buying furniture items.

Measure Your Doors, Hall & Stairs

Doors, hallways and stairs are 'tight spots'. So measure the length and width of entries and passages. Be sure that the length as well as diagonal height of sofa or width of cabinet are less than the height and width of your door and passage.

Measure The Room

After measuring the entry to room, measure the distance of wall opposite to the door from entry to make sure that the furniture can enter and be rotated in the room easily. Measure the length and width of room and height of the ceiling. Take a note of any hangings from the ceiling.

Locate The Windows & Power Outlets

Have a fair idea of the windows and power outlets in the room. Make sure that your furniture doesn't block the window or hide the power outlets rendering them out of reach. Be cautious of electronics that might be plugged in the power outlets and maintain safety.

Know Your Mattress

Beds come in various sizes and tempting designs but after you have measured the space, be sure of your comfort and decide on the bed that fits well. Be careful of the size of mattresses so that they rest properly within the bed boundaries.

TV Units

A common mistake arises while buying TV units as the TV size mentioned by the companies is the diagonal length of the screen and the frame holding the screen or the stand of TV are not included in the size. So, measure the outline of TV before buying TV & entertainment centers.
